Rebreather & Technical Diving @ Aquanauts Grenada

Grenada, July 20th 2009:

Aquanauts Grenada adds now technical diving and diving with closed circuit units to its repertoire. “Diving with rebreathers is like having gills – you don’t make any bubbles and come very, very close to marine life such as eagle rays, jacks, sharks and even the tiny jaw fish” says Peter Seupel, owner of Aquanauts Grenada. With this new service facilities are offered for travelling rebreather divers – scrubber material, 2 and 3 L tanks for rent, O2 supply through a booster pump and washing/storage space. Aquanauts provides inspiration & evolution plus vision. As of November Trial Dives and CCR certification course can be booked. Provision for Trimix will be ready as well. Come to Grenada to explore the deep walls on the west coast – good chance to find more wrecks! Diving on closed circuit units also allows for extended bottom times on Grenada’s deeper wrecks and reefs. Imagine spending an hour exploring the Bianca C or dive the whole Marine Park in one dive for a few hours! Best of all: you breathe warm and moist air and you are not getting cold that easy. Mike Fowler president of Silent Diving, who conducted the training; stated: “The Grenada dive sites are perfect to dive with a rebreather – for their depth and marine life.”

The technical diving is further complimented by TDI courses such as the Advanced Nitrox course and decompression procedures. Aquanauts features dedicated rebreather weeks, where boat and guide are only for the silent divers. First of it will be held from 27th of September until 3rd of October 2009. Come and join us!

☺ As a rebreather diver you may carbon offset your dive time, as during that time you do not exhale CO<sub>2</sub> into the atmosphere, which on average a human being does about 1.6 L per minute! ☺
